

Ed-Co Alumni
Eric Meyer - Class of 2002
Written by Addy Kirby

Humble, caring, and courageous are three words to describe the next Ed-Co Alumni. Eric Meyer graduated in the class of 2002. He owns an automotive collision and mechanical shop called Meyer Collision and Service Center in Guttenberg. In the fall after high school, Eric attended the Collision program at Kirkwood. Following trade school he worked as a technician in the field. Eric bought his first shop in Colesburg nine years ago. Outgrowing the Colesburg shop led to moving to a larger building in Guttenberg. Eric commented, "The automotive industry is constantly changing. I'm constantly continuing my education to do my best to keep up with the changes." He currently resides in rural Osterdock just up the road from where he was born and raised. Eric said, "I like being able to raise my kids in this area, continue farming the family farm and keep growing my business." When asked what he loved about Ed-Co he replied, "Our teachers were great. I really enjoyed football, band and choir too." Eric's advice to current and past graduates is, "Always continue to push yourself to be the best that you can be with your chosen career. Sometimes you have to think outside the box and step outside your comfort zone to better yourself in your career." A friendly face to many, Eric works hard and is proud of where he came from. He is a Viking for life.
